SOCIALIZATION

WHEN & HOW TO SOCIALIZE PETS

1

Make sure that pets have the appropriate vaccinations before being exposed to other animals and public places! Check with your veterinarian for their recommendations based on your area's disease control concerns.

2

Make sure your pet has a solid foundation of "redirection" training in the home using high value treats as a reward for focusing on you as their handler regardless of what is happening around them before going to completely unfamiliar, unenclosed social settings.

3

Keep in mind that even a confident pet in the home can become startled, overstimulated, overexcited, aggressive, fearful or even a flight risk in new environments triggered by any new sight, smell, sound or energy level.

4

Always remain CALM regardless of your dogs behaviors or environmental changes. It's important you are "aware of but non-reactive" to negative reactions or responses from your pets, quickly rewarding positive/appropriate responses.

5

Make modifications as necessary to your handling methods to ensure you can set your pet up for success using positive-reinforcement. Always reward calm or no-response behavior to new sounds, experiences or other distractions.
